This story will have no classroom of the elite spoilers with bare minimum stuff about the plot (of course it will have somewhat spoilers because that's impossible not to do but it's limited to just how the school works) and will take place in a week break the school gave out once the students were given their first points ever at the start of the year and will focus on Hiyori and Y/N male reader there will eventually be some lemon 🍋. Also I will try my best to keep this story updated as it's my first time really trying to write a fan fiction so I'll try my best, any criticism is welcomed.

You have enrolled and have been accepted into the prestigious school of Advanced Nurturing High School you are a student of class C after the first day of class the teacher explains to you how the school works and has explained that all the students will be given 100,000 private points with each point being = to 1 yen and each student in the school has been given the same about of private points. The decides to give the students a one week break to get use to the school and fix some unspecified malfunctions behind the scenes. The class was in a mixed state of confusion and excitement over the news of the points after all there is lots of facilitates on the campus the students can use to be able to get stuff like food, entertainment, supplies, etc. As people started to leave class you decided to make your exit as well to start exploring the campus. After exploring a bit of the campus seeing movie theaters, supermarkets, clothing stores, and just a complete variety of places to go to you can't help but wonder if this is paradise. The school seems so lenient on the points it's almost like a dream, having 100,000 points a month seems too good to be true. In any case you decide to not over spend and be careful with your points in case you ever really need to spend some. As it was already getting late after spending much of your day exploring and gathering basic supplies you head you your designated dorm room that each student gets. Since no one is aloud contact of the outside world while enrolled in this school you have to just make yourself at home in your dorm room. Arriving at the dorms you take the elevator pressing the second floor button of which is where your dorm is located. After heading off the elevator you make it to you designated room and turn the key in the lock muttering "I guess this is it" as you open the door to see your new home for the next 3 year. This is the start of your new life at Advanced Nurturing High
